The houses in the area are all two-storey detached dwellings. Because of their close proximity to one another the area appears densely built-up. The vast majority are one of two groups, namely those on the north side of Wood Road, Dunstall Road, Ernle Road and McKay Road, and those on the south side of Wood Road, Ernle Road and Woodhouse Road. The houses on the north side of Wood Road are generally larger with more garden space, whilst those on the south side are smaller and less spacious. The houses on the north side of Wood Road also have more frontage, with higher front elevations.

The houses on the south side of Wood Road are generally smaller and have less garden space. The houses on the north side of Wood Road are generally larger with more garden space, whilst those on the south side are smaller and less spacious. The houses on the north side of Wood Road also have more frontage, with higher front elevations.

The houses in the area are all two-storey detached dwellings. Because of their close proximity to one another the area appears densely built-up. The vast majority are one of two groups, namely those on the north side of Wood Road, Dunstall Road, Ernle Road and McKay Road, and those on the south side of Wood Road, Ernle Road and Woodhouse Road. The houses on the north side of Wood Road are generally larger with more garden space, whilst those on the south side are smaller and less spacious. The houses on the north side of Wood Road also have more frontage, with higher front elevations.

The houses in the area are all two-storey detached dwellings. Because of their close proximity to one another the area appears densely built-up. The vast majority are one of two groups, namely those on the north side of Wood Road, Dunstall Road, Ernle Road and McKay Road, and those on the south side of Wood Road, Ernle Road and Woodhouse Road. The houses on the north side of Wood Road are generally larger with more garden space, whilst those on the south side are smaller and less spacious. The houses on the north side of Wood Road also have more frontage, with higher front elevations.

The houses in the area are all two-storey detached dwellings. Because of their close proximity to one another the area appears densely built-up. The vast majority are one of two groups, namely those on the north side of Wood Road, Dunstall Road, Ernle Road and McKay Road, and those on the south side of Wood Road, Ernle Road and Woodhouse Road. The houses on the north side of Wood Road are generally larger with more garden space, whilst those on the south side are smaller and less spacious. The houses on the north side of Wood Road also have more frontage, with higher front elevations.

The houses in the area are all two-storey detached dwellings. Because of their close proximity to one another the area appears densely built-up. The vast majority are one of two groups, namely those on the north side of Wood Road, Dunstall Road, Ernle Road and McKay Road, and those on the south side of Wood Road, Ernle Road and Woodhouse Road. The houses on the north side of Wood Road are generally larger with more garden space, whilst those on the south side are smaller and less spacious. The houses on the north side of Wood Road also have more frontage, with higher front elevations.

The houses in the area are all two-storey detached dwellings. Because of their close proximity to one another the area appears densely built-up. The vast majority are one of two groups, namely those on the north side of Wood Road, Dunstall Road, Ernle Road and McKay Road, and those on the south side of Wood Road, Ernle Road and Woodhouse Road. The houses on the north side of Wood Road are generally larger with more garden space, whilst those on the south side are smaller and less spacious. The houses on the north side of Wood Road also have more frontage, with higher front elevations.

The houses in the area are all two-storey detached dwellings. Because of their close proximity to one another the area appears densely built-up. The vast majority are one of two groups, namely those on the north side of Wood Road, Dunstall Road, Ernle Road and McKay Road, and those on the south side of Wood Road, Ernle Road and Woodhouse Road. The houses on the north side of Wood Road are generally larger with more garden space, whilst those on the south side are smaller and less spacious. The houses on the north side of Wood Road also have more frontage, with higher front elevations.

The houses in the area are all two-storey detached dwellings. Because of their close proximity to one another the area appears densely built-up. The vast majority are one of two groups, namely those on the north side of Wood Road, Dunstall Road, Ernle Road and McKay Road, and those on the south side of Wood Road, Ernle Road and Woodhouse Road. The houses on the north side of Wood Road are generally larger with more garden space, whilst those on the south side are smaller and less spacious. The houses on the north side of Wood Road also have more frontage, with higher front elevations.